Duolingo Launches 🥥's 🔟st Emoji Language Course

Pittsburgh, PA (April 1, 2017) — Due to popular demand from parents and grandparents of millennials everywhere, Duolingo, the largest language-learning platform worldwide, has launched the world's first-ever Emoji language course.

Built by a team of two volun*teens* fluent in Emoji and English (but mostly Emoji), Duolingo's new course features \square , \checkmark , \checkmark and \bigcirc exercises designed to help anyone master the Emoji language with just 5 to 10 minutes of practice per day.

"😌 🎇 🔠? 💐 🖓 🔟 🕖," said Duolingo Co-founder and CEO Luis von Ahn.

Translation before taking the Duolingo course: "Thinking about my family, do they know the alphabet? A scientist had an idea and threw away my clock."

Translation after taking the Duolingo course: "Why do people even use words? Science has shown they're a waste of time."

Like most of Duolingo's courses, Emoji was built by bilingual volunteers passionate about preserving and spreading their language and culture.

"People \checkmark to $\underline{\&}$ on emojis, but in a relatively short O, they've far eclipsed their precursor, Egyptian hieroglyphics, and set the O standard of \blacksquare among millennials \cancel{O} ," said Yuna Kode, one of the self-taught Emoji experts behind the course.

For Martha Taylor, a 68-year-old living in Oldham, England, the new course will help her finally understand her Emoji-speaking grandchildren.

"I always see my grandson posting \mathbf{i} and \mathbf{i} . Thanks to Duolingo, I now know to make him eggplant parmesan and peach cobbler whenever he visits \mathbf{k} ." Taylor said.

"Now I can finally talk to my daughter in a language she'll understand Θ ," said Berenice Ring, a desperate mother.

Emoji is spoken by over 2 billion millennials across the world. The Duolingo Emoji course is available on and results for English speakers. According to user test results, having poor English skills can result in higher Emoji proficiency.
